Dear FCC:

I am a medical student and already have many expenses currently. I only carry my phone for safety purposes, and as is it is a hassle. I do not use my phone for chit-chatting, and subsequent increases in cost (when do they ever go down in price?) will probably force me and others to give up that extra "safety" our cellular phones provide us. In the long run this may alter the communication business. So please think about the consumers, even if you think the issue here is "just a dollar."

Thank you for your prompt attention to this matter. Please provide a written response indicating the status/resolution of this matter.

Very truly yours,
